Section 5: Statement of Cultural Heritage Value or Interest

The house located at 37 King Street East in Millbrook, Ontario is in excellent condition and is unique to the region, being representative of Second Empire and Queen Anne styles of architecture. The massing of the house is characteristic of Second Empire design, while the extravagant detailing is indicative of Queen Anne influence. The house, clad in yellow painted clapboard siding, was built circa 1870 as a brick veneer and frame building, which was later re-clad. The building features a hip roof with projecting gables, decorative bargeboard, and deeply overhanging eaves with detailed wooden brackets below. There is also a small Tuscan tower with wrought iron cresting and small windows atop the front elevation of the house.

Robert Deyell, one of five sons of the first settler in the township, John Deyell, built this two-storey house in 1870 on lands extending from King Street to Dufferin Street. While only the house remains, the property once included a tennis court and summerhouse.

The house was used as a funeral parlour in 1945 by George T. MacPherson, who owned a furniture and undertaking business in downtown Millbrook. He sold the property to John Wallace Haw in 1954. The J. Wallace Haw Funeral Home was purchased by Comstock's of Peterborough in 1965 and continued operating until 1972. After this point, the house became a private residence once more. It later served as a cooking school and fine dining establishment, and as a bed and breakfast.

This property presents both historical and architectural significance within the Millbrook community as it was built by one of Millbrook's first citizens and is adorned by many of his trademarks. The house has served the Millbrook community through various uses for nearly 150 years. The house also presents many unique features representative of the Queen Anne Style and stands out within the community as a rare example of the style in excellent condition. The property contributes greatly to the historic King Street view corridor and forms a great part of the historic character of the neighbourhood.
